ABOUT THE ARTIST

Montana Panoramic is an ongoing collection of very unique panoramic photographs by Craig Hergert. Beginning in 1997, this collection of vast landscapes, mountain ranges, rivers, parks, towns, wildlife, hunting and fishing images from all over the great state of Montana has grown to more than 1000 images, and continues to grow each day. Craig is a freelance artist whose photos and paintings are currently on display in several art galleries in Montana, including his gallery in Bozeman at the Emerson Cultural Center for the Arts, and in private collections all over the world. When not out wandering around capturing more images, he makes his home in Bozeman with his wife Julie and son Carl.

Originally trained as a painter, Craig mixes his past skills in fine art, as well as an education in marketing and graphic design to meld all the mediums together. By using multiple focus points, long exposures, and cutting edge lighting techniques, the results add a somewhat painterly effect to his imagery, revealing a style that is very unique. He is part of a new breed of artists that uses today's technology to control every part of the creative process from start to finish. In a world of mass production, specialization and canned art, he prides himself on communicating directly with his patrons and producing everything himself. From image capture, processing, printing, packaging and distribution, to advertising, website design, book production and even sometimes framing.

Offering affordable open edition posters, and small run limited edition prints on fine art archival cotton papers and canvas with sizes ranging from six to sixteen feet wide, each image is individually produced and signed by Craig to ensure the highest quality. "I want my supporters to feel like they have participated in something special, a direct exchange and connection with the artist. Nothing canned, nothing mass produced, just an artist attempting to document a small slice of time, and create artwork that will last a lifetime and many more to come."
