

“ROSS PASS” FIRST PANORAMIC, 8 EXPOSURES LAYERED BY HAND FROM SLIDES: BRIDGER RANGE, 1997

PRELUDE:

I can still remember my first camera and the vivid smells and spectacular light of childhood in the New Mexico wilderness, mountains and desert. It was an amazing place to grow up, but in hindsight, nothing compares to the pure splendor of the magnificent and diverse landscape of Montana. For ten years I have attempted to capture this world through new eyes and a new lens to offer a large field of view in a small slice of time in the great place I call home.

In this collection, there are many images that each tell their own story, whether just for plain fun, or alternating between historical documentation and compositions of beauty alone. There have been quite a few changes in the short time since I began this process, and my hope is that these images will tell their small part. I've done my best to include a wide mix of photos from all over the state, even though I may be a bit partial to my home in the Gallatin Valley. Over the years I've covered quite a bit of ground, and I believe it is possible to still be captivated everywhere I go by the space, life, and great people of Montana. I apologize if I was not able to include your favorite photo, spot or town, but just give me a little more time, and the great wide open.....
